

Online Phd Nursing Education

Online Phd Nursing Education - The online Ph.D. in Nursing Education is a great option for nurses who are ready and willing to step into the educator role, teaching and transforming the next generation of nurses to be compassionate and ethical professionals. Students who enroll for UMKC's online PhD in Nursing degree program will develop knowledge in clinical and biological research, health systems and outcomes research as well as nursing education research. Students can begin their coursework along either the BSN to PhD or MSN to PhD path. Walden's PhD in Nursing program can help you prepare for career advancement and support continuous improvements in nursing science, education, and practice. With a research-focused doctoral degree, you can position yourself for a leadership role in an academic setting, public institution, private foundation, or think tank. Online PhD degrees in nursing education may end up being the means by which PhD programs in nursing education are widely distributed. Online PhD programs in nursing may allow you to continue working either full or part-time as you pursue your online doctorate degree.